AGING BETTER TOGETHER: Collaborating to Improve Outcomes Across British Columbia

November 19-20, 2023

The AMS Nest, University of British Columbia - Vancouver

Hosted by the Edwin S.H. Leong Healthy Aging Program in partnership with the Aging in Place Research Cluster, UBC Health, and the Centre for Technology Adoption for Aging in the North

This inaugural symposium will bring together experts, stakeholders and community members across disciplines to provide a holistic and comprehensive perspective on aging. This interdisciplinary focus will enable reflection, discussion and community engagement on the biological, social, cultural and environmental determinants of healthy aging and strategies for prevention and early intervention to increase health span and add quality years to life.

The two-day event will feature oral presentations, a poster session, an interactive panel discussion for community members, and networking. To facilitate knowledge exchange and collaborations, the symposium will feature just one session at a time. We welcome researchers, health care workers, and others who are interested in aging or who care for older adults to join us for this event. Registration will open in summer of 2023.
